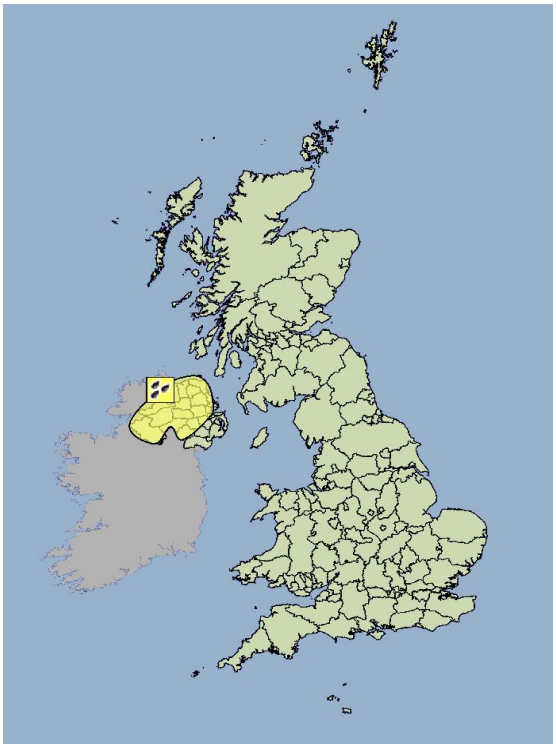
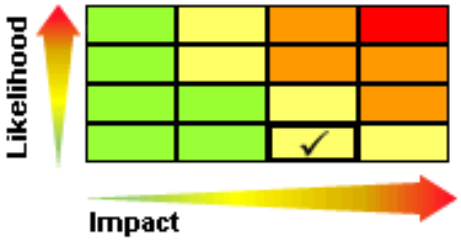
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Once again, rising temperatures seem likely to set off heavy thundery showers later this morning and through the afternoon. With light winds, showers and thunderstorms will be slow-moving and give accumulations of around 20 mm in an hour locally. The showers will die out during the evening.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 11:35 on Sat, 11th Jun 2016 until 20:00 on Sat, 11th Jun 2016

Scattered, heavy downpours will develop today, turning thundery in places. Whilst many places will miss the worst, please be aware of the risk of localised surface water flooding and possible disruption to transport.
